The Dutch healthcare system

First level:
- General practitioner (huisarts)
- Physiotherapy
- First line psychologist
- Dentist

Second level:
- Medical specialist (hospital)
- Dietician
- Second line psychologist

Third level:
- Specialised laboratories
- Expertise centers of an academical (university) hospital
The first level

• The general practitioner - central role in the healthcare system in The Netherlands

• The GP knows the medical history of the patient and will have the first consultation with the patient. The patient is registered to a GP

• The GP refers the patient, if necessary, to the appropriate medical specialist in the hospital. The GP also determines the urgency of the referral

• The advantage for the patient is that he/she will immediately be referred to the right medical specialist
The first level

• The GP is a “generalist”

• Broad knowledge of all kind of diseases

• Does primary healthcare and also small surgical operations, Pap smear and other gynaecological examinations, ECG, hearing tests (spirometry) etc

• Takes care of chronical diseases, like diabetes, COPD (lung diseases), hypertension, care for elderly people. The GP also arranges home care
The second level

- For the second level care a referral is needed from the GP
- Some insurance companies do not require a referral from the GP
- The medical specialist has in depth knowledge of his/her medical specialty
The third level

- The medical opinions of the medical specialist and GP can lead to referral to a third level of care: specialised laboratories or expertise centers of an academical (university) hospital.

In The Netherlands there is a free choice of medical doctors.

Health Insurance (1)

• Everyone who resides or works in The Netherlands is legally required to have the same basic healthcare insurance package

• The basic (standard) healthcare insurance package can be supplemented by additional optional packages, for example for Dentistry or Physiotherapy

• There are numerous insurance companies in The Netherlands which are used by Expats. Always best to shop around to find the best package which suits you and your family requirements
Health Insurance (2)

- The basic healthcare insurance package covers most general healthcare costs, but does not currently cover the costs of dental treatment for adults, some maternity and post-natal care and the full costs of physiotherapy.

- Children under the age of 18 are automatically covered by their parents’ basic healthcare insurance package and also receive coverage for most dental care.
Reimbursement

• Your insurance company will pay for your hospital visit or admittance and will reimburse you for these costs. If you don’t have any insurance, you’ll have to pay everything yourself. So please take care that you are adequately insured. This is your own responsibility

• Remember that the costs of treatment by a medical specialist and/or hospital admittance can be very high
